(A) Maximum period before burial.

There is no specific period within which burial must take place regardless of whether the remains have been embalmed or not.

(B) Embalming

Embalming is only required by regulation when remains are to be exported. Embalming facilities are available in major funeral establishments in Perth and major provincial cities and towns in Western Australia.

NOTE: Current West Australian practice does not allow for embalming in cases where the deceased tested positive for HIV infection and Hepatitis C.

(C) Cremation

Cremation is permissible under local law. Crematoria are located in Perth and in a number of cities and towns elsewhere in Western Australia.

Cremation urns range in price from sealed plastic containers for US$100.00 to US$250.00 for timber and other types of urns.

(G) Exhumation and Shipments

Exhumation can occur within 2 weeks of a burial, or with cemetery board permission after 12 months but usually not granted in less than 10 years. Also, depending on where the exhumed remains are to be sent (same or other cemetery) or for cremation, permission from the Minister for Local Government may be required.

The usual procedure is for the funeral director to apply to the Minister for Local Government for approval to remove the remains from the cemetery. Upon approval, the funeral director then submits his application, together with the Minister's approval to the Cemeteries Board, who then carry out the exhumation.

(H) Autopsies

The practice in Western Australia is that all accidental deaths or deaths due to suspicious or unnatural causes, or anyone who had not seen a medical practitioner in the three months prior to death (which would normally include U.S. citizen visitors), are referred to the Coroner's office for determination of death. The Coroner will decide whether to sign the Report of Death straight away or whether a post mortem is needed. When a post mortem is required, it can take from 3-6 months to obtain an official cause of death for release to the Registrar of Births Deaths and Marriages in Perth. In some cases the Coroner's finding could be held up for a number of months depending on individual circumstances. A full death certificate showing the cause of death is not required for shipment of ashes or remains to the United States.

After the Coroner releases the cause of death, the next of kin may apply for a full certified copy of the West Australian Death certificate. Post must rely on the next of kin to provide a copy of the death certificate to assist with the completion of the Consular Report of Death.
